Captain Herbert Bickersteth's apartment at the office of the Secretary of State. When I entered the room the Emperor received me with the following words spoken in a tone of the most vehement reprobation—

"A very bad time they you forbade the Ministers to make their representations, and but I also wish that my Ministers should present themselves personally to me."

"Your Majesty, answer I, by virtue of the law I alone am authorized and charged to make direct reports to your Majesty. This is also necessary, if the proceedings of the Government are to have a frank character. It, within the last few years, has been difficult to get on to the way of making reports to your Majesty, it is an opposition to the law, which gives this right to the Chancellor, your Majesty, alone; but as soon as your Majesty orders I will yield to your wishes and propose a change in the law."

"In a still excited tone, his majesty, William II said, "I have worked hard to get your plans meet with your persistent opposition. I look to measures which I consider useful be carried out thoroughly."

I do not oppose the improvements which you have made, but I oppose the method by which some of them need certain modifications which are absolutely necessary, and I shall have the honour of submitting them to your Majesty."

"No, no; no modification," interrupted the Emperor. "I wish my orders to be carried out and I give them." The severity of this expression had exhausted my calmness, and I said, "I think I perceive that my services are not fortunate enough to please your Majesty and that some thoughts exist of getting rid of me."

The Emperor made a confirmatory gesture with his hand upon which I continued: "In that case there is nothing to do but to hand your Majesty my resignation, and then like to her royal Majesty to let me remain here until May, so that I may personally defend the military hills in the Reichstag, as I fear that my successor may find it difficult to break the opposition in Parliament."

When I was leaving the Emperor shook his hand and said, and at last, "No, no. I bowed without saying a word, and waited for a sign from the Emperor to withdraw. After a few painful moments of silence his Majesty said, in a still more excited tone, "There is still a word to be said about your mysterious negotiations with Mr. Windfuhr. It seems to me that you have received his letter."

"Daring all this time, I did my best to support with the greatest trouble, but I have now got out and said: "I know quite well that for some time I have been surrounded by spies and traitors, who watch every step I take." It is true again, that I have invited Dr. Windfuhr to my room, in order to discuss certain things with him, but it is not only this: it is my duty, to have communication with skilled politicians, whether they be members of Parliament or not, and nobody, not even your Majesty, will be able to prevent my doing it."

After these words spoken in the greatest excitement, the Emperor dismissed the Chancellor with a smile, and said, "Good-bye, and so ended this fatal scene between the young sovereign and the old Chancellor, and the gulf was formed which can never be bridged over."

THE RUSSIAN CHATUCHIKOV D.

WILMINGTON, 7th November.

I was admitted to-day to the sumptuous quarters of M. de Giora, the Russian Ambassador, extremely, perhaps seriously, here for ours, but his insolent behaviour has brought me into the sacred hours of family life.

LONDON, 12th November.

Early this morning a fire broke out in the Russian suburb of London, in the quarter occupied by lumber yards, factories, and a large number of tenements filled with poor families, caused heavy damage. Only one casualty resulted, that was the death of a child, which was born in the flames.

The troops gained possession of the city, but soon crossed and wrecked the Government and newspaper offices. Order was eventually restored and the siege of the city raised.

H.M.P. FREDDERICK AND INDIA.

BOMBAY, 25th November.

The London correspondent of the Bombay Gazette writes that the Empress Frederick has given up the idea of sending a fleet to India to suppress a conspiracy which has been discovered in Athens, with ramifications in other parts of the Empire, having for its object the overthrow of the present ruling dynasty of Greece.

Among the prominent men said to be doshous of this plot are the King of Greece, the Duke of York, and the Prince of Wales.

Some have thought it probable that Russia may, after all, consent to "Phase" Ferdinand's candidature and the recognition of Bulgarian independence."

Sir Neville Lubbock, who has been sent to Washington to negotiate a reciprocity treaty between the United States and the British Colonies, has now arrived. Foster, representing the State Department, had conference this afternoon on the subject of reciprocity.

BERLIN, 13th November.

Information is claiming many victims in Poen. Since the disaster appeared in this place it seemed to be only natural that the news should be reported to the authorities. Indeed, it has already made its appearance in the northern suburbs of Berlin and already the cause amounts to a great number.

LONDON, 13th November.

A widespread conspiracy to create a representative assembly has been discovered in Russia. Moscow is the centre. Advice from St. Petersburg states that the authorities there are becoming more and more suspicious as the internal situation of the empire continues to grow more critical. There are considerable rumours regarding the plot of which the Emperor himself is the author. As a result of this feeling the ministers of the nobility exercising power and residing in different parts of the country have been warned that they will be held responsible for any manifestation of political feeling against the Government which may occur in the provinces of the local administration.

In the Duke of Wellington and the Duke of Orléans, prominent Orleanists, have arrived here for a conference with the Comte de Paris in regard to charges against the Duke of Orleans in connection with the Malib divorce case. The Duke of Orleans persists that his relations with Mme. de Malib have been purely platonic. The French press, however, is not satisfied with this explanation and the Duke of Wellington does not affect the political prospects of the Orleanists. The English papers give almost no attention to the case.

LONDON, 13th November.

The Evening News of the city published a story to-day to the effect that Realis Bonaparte has filed a petition seeking a divorce from her husband, Louis Clément Bonaparte. This is the outcome of a rather complicated series of legal events which had their origin in the divorce suit instituted against Rosalie by her former husband, the Duke of Orléans. The mentioned suit Louis Clément Bonaparte was charged by the husband with having been criminally intimate with Rosalie. His allegations were supported by evidence, and the divorce was granted. The relations between Rosalie and Louis Clément in their marriage, the latter assuming on the part of the name of Clément. Two days later Louis Clément contracted a marriage with Laura Scott, and it constitutes the ground for the divorce asked for by Rosalie. Louis Clément Bonaparte is a son of Prince Louis Lucien Bonaparte, who died a few days ago.

MOROCCO AND FRANCE.

LONDON, 13th November.

The Times has a dispatch from Tangier saying: "A plot was discovered to place the Sultan's favourite brother, Muley Ismail, on the throne. The Sultan's chief adviser has been disgraced and deposed, and, who was Rabil of Fez, has been deposed and sent to Morocco with several noble accomplices."

GIBRALTAR, 9th November.

The dispute between the French Government and the Sultan of Morocco regarding the ownership of the coast of Tunis does not seem to have been settled in his favour, and the French have got no right to take possession of Tunis. There is no doubt that serious trouble will follow. A majority of the inhabitants of the coast do not look with favour upon the claims of either country, but settle-to throw aside all foreign government and form an independent government of their own. The Sultan of Morocco recently sent a number of emissaries to London to endeavour to gain support to his pretensions to the sovereignty, but the reception they met with will be apt to dishearten others from attempting to influence the natives of Tunis."
